

“Life after death”

Jay Shree Swaminarayan,

Your group has been given the opportunity today to have a face-off with a special guest; in this document you will find information about the beliefs of your guest.

Task 1:

In your group, study the special guest and find out what it is that this person does that would change once he/she starts believing in life after death.

Task 2:

The guest's have been specially selected as they believe there is no such thing as life after death. Remember that not all characters do bad things; however they still don't believe in life after death. So your group has to prepare a 10 minute ripping session (argument) in which every member of the group will work to establish the belief Life after death with the guest and to make them believe in it.

Task 3:

Once your 10 minutes are up, your group will be assigned a character and the ripping can begin.

You may do whatever is necessary to establish the point 'life after death'. If for some reason you are unable to achieve this goal then you will get ripped by the host's... “Enjoy!!”

Overall information on Life after Death through the logical lens...

It would not be logical and fair to say you only play the game once...

To anyone that says there is no such thing as life after death, it is ideal that you get them to answer this scenario:

The world has been up and running for many millions of years and people have been living and dying. Are you ready to believe that out of them millions of years and the millions of years the world will run... "Are you ready to say that you only get around 0-100 year time slot to live..."

So if you are saying you only get one chance to live then why is it, that in that valuable one chance you did not end up in third world Africa or in a hard situated life.

There adds up to be a reason to say you don't only live once. You are discarding too much if you say this is the one and only life.

Overall information on Life after Death through Scriptures...

The Vedas and all the other Sat-Shasta say that we have a soul. The soul is eternal and un-destroyable therefore it will never die. Scripture's state the soul is the one that moves from body to body. There are 8.4million types of living forms that the soul can reside in. you have been give this birth on the basis on many attachment you have built up through many life's.

Overall information on Life after Death through science...

Through science the existence of the soul has been proven. There is much evidence of this, e.g. difference between a dead body and a living body. Hospitals have seen many cases of a dead person coming back to life within 1hr of death. Some of the greatest scientist have agreed and done many test to prove the soul.

Science has not found sufficiency proof to say there is life after death but they are still very unsure about the concept "life before death."

Who teaches a baby; how to cry, how to be scared of certain thing and many other human adaptation a baby is born with?

Where does a baby learn these things from?

Research is ongoing but our religion already has the answers.

Look on the back of the £10 note. I wonder who that is?

Medusa

Medusa is that lady from the Greek times. She is pretty evil so we thought we'll bring to this Yuvak mandal sabha so your group can sort her out.

- Whoever she looks at turns to stone,(but not today)
- She doesn't value people's lives
- she will turn people to stone and then assume they will never be born again
- she doesn't believe in the soul
- she goes by the Greek philosophy, which says people live, work and then die.
- She believes in some sort of heaven

Your group's job today is to rip her on anything and everything within a 10minute slot. We can let her think she knows best and it will be ideal to make sure your group is not defeated

Superwomen

Kristen wells known as superwoman had a rather hasty and stubborn personality. Later, as a professor, she mellowed slightly, becoming a experienced professional, though she still has quite a hero worship of the people she studies--she also has a certain amount of doubt lurking in the back of her mind as to whether she's up to standing alongside the greatest heroes of the twentieth century. Once she dons the Superwoman costume, though, most of her doubt vanishes as she realizes that she is the woman she has idolized all her life.

- Kristen is also bound by the laws of time travel in her era not to reveal any information that might change the future.
- Being hasty and stubborn, though, she'll bend this rule as much as she needs to, if it will save a life or keep history on track.
- Of course, in doing this, she always plays into her own destiny.
- She also relies heavily on her force of personality to get her through many situations.
- She is basically taking the power of God as in only he has the right to take one's life s if he thinks it time for that person to die then they should die, she comes in the way and saves this person
- What happens when you die? Who will save people then?

Binlarden

As you may know Binlarden is the most famous person in the world. He has achieved mass murder and is pretty proud of it.

Point to consider when it comes to Binlarden:

- He don't believe in life after death
- Believes in some sort of heaven
- Believes in terrorism
- He say's "you only live once and you'll die one day anyway."
- If there was a such thing as life after death then it wouldn't mean anything anyway the Americans are still crazy

In you group discuss further what Binlarden believes and don't let him mess with your head... because he is known to make people want to commit suicide.

Jigsaw

We have brought the Jigsaw dude to Kenton Mandir and yes back from the dead for your group to sort him out before he attempts to sort you out.

John Kramer, commonly referred to as "Jigsaw", is a character in the Saw movies. Jigsaw, introduced in the series as John Kramer, was a civil engineer dying from an inoperable frontal lobe tumour that had developed from colon cancer.

Point to consider when it comes to Jigsaw:

- After a failed suicide attempt, Kramer experienced a new respect for his own life and set out to put others through deadly trials to help them appreciate their own lives by testing their will to live through self-sacrifice.
- Frequently the tests were symbolic of a perceived flaw in each person's life.
- The rules are tasks that the person must perform in order to pass the test and survive; however, the tasks often involve extreme self-mutilation, although Jigsaw on occasion has used psychological torture for the subject's test.
- Jigsaw is not considered an actual serial killer, but a "scientist" who is determined to initiate the survival instinct in his "subjects", believing that humanity no longer used its instinct of survival.

"I wana play a game... Choose to live or die? Make your choice"
